to change their purchasing behavior to reduce negative environmental impact, with 44% saying they are willing to drastically change their lifestyles to live in a more sustainable way'

-The number of multigenerational households has grown rapidly (271% between 2011-2021), requiring a new set of design strategies.

-Wellness real estate is outpacing other types of construction.

-While single family properties are getting bigger, multifamily properties are getting smaller.

-Residential wellness is a top priority for homeowners, with a focus on indoor air quality, mental wellness enhancements, home office ergonomics, and fitness.

-Workplace wellness is a must for employees and businesses, which need to rethink their office design to provide environments that are meticulously clean and safe, but also less stressful, to lure employees back to the workplace.

The Trends Report details industry insights impacting all sectors of design, including the post-pandemic evolution of office, hospitality, healthcare, and senior living design, as well as business trends for firms, including the difficulties of finding qualified candidates. It is now available to download, free for ASID members and $99.95 for non-members. Read More

>DIFFA BY DESIGN, held Mar. 24-26 at Center 415 in NYC, was a "massive success," raising more than half a million dollars. The biggest fundraiser of the year for DIFFA, the three-day event attracted over 2,500 attendees and raised over $540,000 to help those across the country struggling with HIV/AIDS, homelessness, food scarcity, and mental health issues. The star-studded

Gala on Thursday night was co-hosted by architect David Rockwell and Interior Design Editor-in-Chief Cindy Allen, featuring special guest Tony Award®-winning actor Jane Krakowski, and performances
